OVERVIEW

A coming-of-age story, 45 RPM is a dramatic and edgy love story poised against the backdrop of a remote Cold War era army base.

LOGLINE

In the Autumn of 1960 a reclusive teenager discovers, love, loss and rock and roll.

SYNOPSIS

It's the Autumn of 1960. Fifteen-year-old Parry Tender doesn't know where to turn. Hassled by the local cop, Parry wants out of his small town hell. He's lived in Goose Lake all his life. It isn't much; about two hundred folks in all give or take. It's five hundred miles north of nowhere which to the satisfaction of the United States Air Force makes it only five hundred miles south of the "DEW-LINE", a continent wide chain of early warning radar stations constructed across Canada's Arctic during the paranoia of the Cold War. With its four-thousand-foot gravel runway, Saskatchewan's Goose Lake is the perfect spot to airlift men and materials into Canada's frozen north. It's all very secret – all very boring – and no one wants out more than Parry.

Parry isn't asking for much. He only wants a little more that he already has which is an old Cree grandfather named Peter George who isn't even kin, and his best and only friend Luke, a thirteen year old girl who looks and acts more like a boy. Parry knows the dangers of small town life. Suicide cured his mother's troubles, and his father? Well, that's another story.

When a fluke atmospheric condition allows a fifty thousand watt Manhattan radio station to pump its infectious rock'n'roll signal into Canada's far north and out through the small paper speaker of Parry's RCA radio, Luke can't believe their luck. WABC – New York, 770 on the AM dial is running a radio contest. The winner and a guest will be flown to New York City to attend Alan Freed's Fourth of July rock'n'roll party at the Brooklyn Paramount. It all seems simple enough. Parry and Luke will win their escape from Goose Lake. But when Debbie Baxter, the pretty daughter of an American Army Air Force Major steels Parry's heart, no one is certain what will happen next.

ABOUT THE PRODUCTION

45 RPM, a co-production between Calgary-based Nomadic Pictures and Don Carmody Productions, began principle photography in and around Regina, Canada on September 25, 2007. The 1950s period piece wrapped after 17 days of shooting.

45 RPM is a coming-of-age story exploring the discovery of rock and roll and the complicated relationships of Parry and Luke, the central characters in the fictional remote northern town of Goose Lake, Saskatchewan at the height of the Cold War.

The feature film was written and directed by David Schultz (Jet Boy).

45 RPM blends a mixture of veteran Hollywood actors and relative industry newcomers. The film stars Michael Madsen (Reservoir Dogs, Kill Bill), Emmy Award nominee August Schellenberg (Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee), Kim Coates (Black Hawk Down, Assault on Precinct 13), Amanda Plummer (Pulp Fiction) and Mackenzie Porter (Dinosapiens, Christmas in Wonderland).

45 RPM exceeds expectations for a period film. It entices the audience with dramatic dialogue alternating between heartwarming and heartbreaking.

Canadian Jordan Gavaris plays Parry Tender, a well-intentioned though rebellious teenager who views life in Goose Bay as nothing short of suffocating. When a radio signal from New York city arrives unexpectedly a plan of escape is set in motion with consequences that force Parry to grown up sooner than he would have anticipated.

The project is produced by Nomadic Pictures (The Incredible Mrs. Ritchie, Broken Trail) principals Mike Frislev and Chad Oakes, who received an Emmy Award for Best Outstanding Mini-Series for their break-out western Broken Trail and Don Carmody Productions with Don Carmody (Chicago, Silent Hill) as executive producer. Anand Ramayya (Wapos Bay, Cosmic Current) co-produced.

CAST BIOGRAPHIES

Jordan Gavaris

2007 proved to be an exciting year for rookie actor Jordan Gavaris.

After graduating from high school in spring 2007 he embarked on path not unfamiliar to his friends and family and enrolled in university studies beginning the following September.

Around the same time Jordan considered pursuing an interest in acting. This pursuit would temporarily derail his first semester of academic post-secondary education.

Jordan Gavaris celebrated his 18th birthday on September 25, 2007. The same day principal photography began on his first role – as lead character in the feature film 45 RPM. And, 17 shooting days later marked the completion of his first role.

Jordan now works to balance his studies and continuing work in film, television and theatre productions while residing in Ontario, Canada.

Justine Banzky

Justine Banzky caught the attention of casting directors while auditioning in her hometown of Edmonton, Canada.

Justine's relative inexperience will come as a surprise to the audience of her inaugural role in 45 RPM as she appears with the grace and talent of an industry veteran.

She continues her studies and resides with her family in Edmonton.

August Schellenberg

August Werner Schellenberg was born in Montreal, Quebec, Canada on July 25, 1936 to a Swiss father and an English-Mohawk mother. He lived in Montreal until moving to Toronto, Ontario, where he made his home from 1967 until 1995. Currently living in Dallas, he is married to actress Joan Karasevich and is the father of three daughters.

August is a lifelong athlete, a champion diver and boxer in his youth who currently participates in celebrity charity sporting events. He has taught acting seminars at the Centre for Indigenous Theatre and at York University, both in Toronto. He continues to conduct motivational workshops in schools and for cultural and community organizations across North America.

A 1966 graduate of the National Theatre School of Canada, August began his acting career in the theatre with a six-month tour of Ontario performing for high school students with the Crest Theatre Hour Company.

August has appeared at Ontario's renowned Shaw and Stratford festivals; at Stratford he received the 1967 Tyrone Guthrie Award for most promising young actor.

The early Canadian classic film Rip Off in 1971 marks the beginning of a film career that has spanned almost four decades and includes: Power Play (Peter O'Toole), Bear Island (Vanessa Redgrave), Bruce Beresford's Black Robe and Terrence Malick's The New World (Colin Farrell, Christian Bale).

His diverse television achievements include August's Emmy-nominated portrayal of Sitting Bull in Dick Wolf's HBO production Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee also starring Adam Beach, Aidan Quinn, and Anna Paquin.

August was presented with the National Theatre School of Canada's Gascon-Thomas Lifetime Achievement Award upon wrapping production on 45 RPM.

THE STORY OF 45 RPM

There is no question that the making of 45 RPM was a labour of love for all those involved.

45 RPM, a challenging cinematic undertaking, was a project in limbo for a number of years until writer/director David Schultz approached his good friend Mike Frislev and the pieces of the puzzle began to fall in to place.

Since the inception of Nomadic Pictures in 1995, producers Mike Frislev and Chad Oakes have engaged David Schultz as a writer on a number of projects.

Their relationship was well established when Schultz approached Frislev with the script for 45 RPM, the timeless story of the awkward transition from adolescents to adulthood that is set to the soundtrack of the politically unstable post-war 1950s.

who was able to complete the financing structure for his friend's treatment in spite of the perceived hurdles of producing a period piece in rural Saskatchewan.

Teamed with co-producer Anand Ramayya and executive producer Don Carmody, the transition from script to screen began with a collection of producers and key creative crew who rallied to support the project and the director.

Described as an unrelenting ball of energy, David Schultz possessed a surprising calm on set of the film shot on location in Saskatchewan. Schultz's unparalleled passion and unbridled spirit reigned as he directed with modesty and intelligence.

While Schultz finalized the creative direction of the project, Frislev set about orchestrating the business affairs of such an undertaking and producer Chad Oakes worked alongside casting director Jackie Lind to assemble an originally refreshing cast of talented performers. Taking a risk by casting the lead roles with unknown actors, Chad Oakes and David Schultz were determined to fill the adult roles with veteran industry professionals...an objective that was exceeded with the addition of Michael Madsen, August Schellenberg, Kim Coates and Amanda Plummer to the roster.

The casting was not complete. The Douglas DC-3 aircraft is another central character in the storyline. The plane opens the film and provides an instant audience connection to the military presence and implications of the cold war on the residents of Goose Bay.

The DC-3 is an American fixed-wing, propeller-driven aircraft whose speed and range revolutionized air transport in the 1930s and 1940s. When retired from use in World War II the transport aircraft became central to the success of the US cold war tactics, including transportation to remote DEW Line stations in northern Canada.

However, finding a camera-ready plane that was both flight worthy and restored to original condition presented a very serious logistical challenge. Eventually, the producers were able to locate a suitable plane operated by retired pilots and filmed second unit outside of St. Louis, MO.

ABOUT THE DEW LINE

The Distant Early Warning Line, also known as the DEW Line or Early Warning Line, was a system of radar stations in the far northern Arctic region of Canada, with additional stations along the North Coast and Aleutian Islands of Alaska, in addition to the Faroe Islands, Greenland, and Iceland.

It was set up to detect incoming Soviet bombers during the Cold War, a task that quickly became outdated when intercontinental ballistic missiles became the main delivery system for nuclear weapons.

One such station is the fictional Goose Bay, Saskatchewan.

Nomadic Pictures and Don Carmody Productions present 45 RPM starring Michael Madsen and introducing Jordan Gavaris. Written and directed by David Schultz, the feature length drama is a coming-of-age story of love and loss set to the soundtrack of the original rock and roll.
